Let's make some decisions about our application's interface.

Let's end the session with action items.

The diagram illustrates a mobile application's user flow. At the center is a menu screen with options: ACCUEIL, A PROPOS, BOUTIQUE, and CONTACT. Red lines radiate from this central menu to ten surrounding wireframes, each representing a different screen in the app. The screens include a 'Contact us' page with a map and contact details, a 'A PROPOS' page with a list of items, a 'BOUTIQUE' page with a grid of products, a 'CONTACT' page with a map and contact details, and several other pages featuring images, text, and interactive elements like buttons and checkboxes. The wireframes are arranged in a circular pattern around the central menu, with some screens connected to multiple others, indicating a complex navigation structure.
